Yesterday the police force timed 12 automobiles in the west end of the city. Of these there were two that exceeded the speed limit and these machines were owned by outside parties and they will be apprehended.

An alarm sent in from box 12 at about 1 o'clock Tuesday called out the fire department to the Model laundry where the roof had caught fire from the chimney. It was quickly extinguished and the damage was slight.

John Arendama, a section foreman on the Pere Marquette railroad, was given the surprise of his life through an unexpected visit from his brother Arie, of Passaic, N. J., whom he had not seen for twenty two years. The brothers have been in this country since they separated and although they corresponded, neither ever took a vacation to visit the other.

Sheriff Andre is seriously considering starting a rogues' gallery of his own at the jail. His idea is to secure photographs and measurements of every prisoner who is held for a serious offense. Thus if anything happened such as Wednesday night's affair it would be an easy matter to put out photographic cards on short notice. The sheriff obtained a good picture of Vos easily and it was not difficult to get a good description of him as he is pretty well scarred. Gayel was not such an easy proposition however, and the officers were compelled to send out information concerning him without an accompanying photo. Reward cards have been sent broadcast over the country in the hope of capturing the pair.

G. Klassen has sold through the Kouw Agency a lot on 21st street to F. G. Burt of Detroit.

Work has been started on the brick walls of the large addition to the Gelatine plant on the north side.

William and Tom Peeks have sold to John Peeks, ten acres of land in Fillmore township, south of the city for $800.

Rev. John Van Ess, missionary of the Reformed church in Arabia is here for a short visit, he having received a furlough after eight years in the foreign field.

One of the oldest residents of Holland, Klass DeWitt, has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday anniversary. He has lived in this country for 45 years.

The heirs of the late Jacob J. Van Dyke have sold two and a half acres of lake front on the north side to Charles G. Aldrich of Elgin, Ill., who is enlarging and remodeling the house and making a fine summer home of it. Isaac Kouw & Co., made the deal.

L. E. Van Drezer, who has been conducting a restaurant in this city since 1889, has sold his business to John Hoffman, chef on the steamer Nyack. Mr. Van Drezer is one of the best known restaurant men in western Michigan. Since 1900 Mr. Van Drezer has not had the doors of his place locked, keeping it open 24 hours a day.

The annual meeting of the south Ottawa Mail Carriers' association was held recently at the home of the president, A. Rosbach, at Holland the following officers were elected: President, A. Rosbach; vice president, J. G. Pessink; secretary, J. W. Brinkman, all of Holland, and treasurer, John Bosch of Zeeland.

News has reached here of the marriage of Rev. Harry P. Boot and Miss Anne Meengs at Amoy, China, on July 18. Both are engaged in mission work for the Reformed church in China. Rev. Mr. Boot is a graduate of Hope college and the Western Theological seminary and Miss Meengs' home was formerly in Cedar Grove, Wis.

Contractor E. S. Holkeboer has taken the contract for erecting a new residence for Attorney A. Visscher on the latter's place on State street. The first story will be of brick and the second story of pebble dash or cast plaster. It will be completed about February 1 and will be one of the handsomest suburban homes in this part of the state. Architect Jas. Price drew up the plans.

A special course in Dutch was opened at the Central Avenue Christian school Monday. It will last for five weeks and is only for those scholars who wish to take instruction in Dutch part of them attending the morning session and part the afternoon session. Mr. Bosman, the instructor has charge of the classes.

Plans have been completed for the Old Settler's picnic, which will be held on August 13 at Henry Arnold's Spring Grove picnic grounds in Jamestown. The exercises will begin at 9 o'clock. The speakers of the day will be Congressman Diekema and Attorneys Vander Meulen and Sooy of Holland.

John Zacharias, a street workman, of Grand Haven, was arrested by his bride of a few months and will have a hearing later. It is claimed that she suspected her husband and followed him downtown. She discovered that he was in a room with another woman and threatened to force the door if not admitted. It is claimed that when the door was opened Zacharias was under the bed. Zacharias' father bailed his son out of jail.

Sheriff Andre has served notice upon the proprietors of the Macatawa bay resorts that all slot machines and other gambling devices will have to be abolished. Numerous complaints have been made by the cottage owners that several of these machines are in operation and unless the managers resolve to throw them out voluntarily, arrests will follow. The township officials are carefully watching the resorts as to Sunday closing of all objectionable amusements and unless the proprietors strictly observe the board's edict, steps will be immediately taken to enforce the state blue laws and make the lid air tight.

Have you seen the man in our window? Lokker Rutgers Co.

Assault at Grand Haven

A posse of angry men beat the woods surrounding Highland Park Saturday afternoon in search of a man wearing a black shirt over a white undershirt and possessed of a revolver. This man had accosted little Jennie Miller, a twelve year old girl, at shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon on the road between Highland Park and Grand Haven, and by force dragged her from the sidewalk back into the adjacent woods. Fortunately the road is much traveled and the approach of people frightened him away very soon after he had dragged the little girl away from the public highway and the assaulter was forced to flee. Before he departed he had thrown the girl's pocket book back to her and threatened to kill her if she moved away from the place to which he had taken her. Within a half an hour the sheriff's officers together with City Officers Wierenga and Bishop were on the trail, and a big posse of men were beating the woods to find the fugitive. Most of them were armed as it was believed that the man they sought possessed a gun and would make a fight before he submitted to capture.

Jennie Miller is a Grand Rapids girl and is spending the summer at her parents' cottage at Highland Park. For some time she has been in the habit of walking a great deal for her health and has made a practice of walking along Lake avenue to town. It is a peaceful old thoroughfare and for a great deal of the distance runs through the woods. However, it is the only road to the resort and during the day there is a great amount of travel over it.

Saturday afternoon, the girl left the cottage at about ten after three and started along Lake avenue for town. When she had reached a point on the road near the Duncan woods a man accosted her and informed her that there were a couple of drunken men just ahead who had frightened several women earlier in the afternoon. "I'll show you a short cut through the woods and you will miss meeting them" he volunteered.

The girl refused and he seized her and dragged her from the road back into the clump of woods, threatening to kill her if she cried out, at the same time he took two handkerchiefs out of his pocket and bound them over her mouth to gag her. She at first thought that he had chloroformed her, but the theory is now that she became, dazed from fright for an instant. At the same instant the man became frightened and the members that he threw her pocket book back to her and said "Here's your pocket book!" and warning her not to move, he made off into the woods.

Two women, whom the girl did not know, came along the road and she informed them what had taken place. Gerit Ekkens, who was driving to the lake in a delivery wagon, drove rapidly to August Boser's house at the entrance to Lake Forest cemetery and finding no one at home, forced an entry through the basement window and reached the telephone.

He called up the jail and within ten minutes Sheriff Andre had a car full of deputies tearing out over Lake avenue in his big Buick machine. Marshal Wierenga and City Officer Bishop also joined in the chase and at Highland Park the posse was organized. The sheriff called upon all the men he could find at the resort to turn in and aid the officers and in a remarkably short time twenty men were in the hunt. Some were left to watch the car line and others were detailed for service in beating the woods.

The search of the woods had availed nothing and it was nearly dusk when the parties began coming back to Highland Park. Marshal Wierenga came out of the woods near the old pavilion site. A car was just coming up from the loop and as the marshal approached the track, August Boser came running up and called to the officer.

"He's on the car! Stop it."

The marshal stopped the car and pointing to a man in one of the seats August said:

"That's the fellow."

Deputy Sheriff Bonner, who had not been given a very clear description of the man, happened to be near, seizing the man in question, he put him under arrest and notified the sheriff that a suspect had been arrested. As the man stepped out of the car, he is alleged to have said: "What do you want me for—this holdup down the road?"

The little girl was able to give a very clear description of the man who had assailed her and her nerve and coolness proved of great value to the officers in their search.

She told Sheriff Andre that the holdup man was about 18 years old slight in build with dark hair. He wore a black shirt and had no coat. She also remembered that he wore a signet ring and she recalled the handkerchiefs, one of which had a peculiar border.

When she saw the suspect captured on the car, she identified him as the man with whom she had had the encounter. A search revealed the handkerchiefs which the girl also identified and the man wore a signet ring, which she stated was very much like the one she had noticed on the assailant's finger. He had on a coat but under it was a black shirt. The identification fully satisfied Sheriff Andre that the right man had been caught and he was taken to jail and locked up.

The suspect gives his name as Charles Swayle of Indianapolis. He states that he is not yet seventeen years of age which is corroborated by his father who arrived in Grand Haven as soon as possible after receiving the telegram sent him by the officers. Swayle denies that he is the man wanted for the assault and claims that he can prove an alibi. He also claims that he came down from Grand Rapids to spend the day and had been in bathing nearly all afternoon. To others he is alleged to have said that the water was so cold that he could stay in but a little while.

The Man who is Worthy

Remember to come to the Primaries on SEPT. 6th, and cast your vote for him. He deserves to be returned.

never been a bad boy according to the father's story, and has been working steady until a short time ago when he left home in company with another boy. The parents are very well thought of and respectable people.

The sheriff is very confident that the Miller girl is certain in her identification. Swayle will await the disposition of his case in the jail as it is thought it will have to be handled by the juvenile court.

Otto Kan has sold his launch "O. K." to J. Kole.

The Crawford Transportation Co. will give an excursion with the Steamer Arundell, Sunday, July 31, to Grand Haven and Spring Lake. Leave Holland 9:30. 50 cents round trip.

The framework for the new saw-mill for C. L. King & Co., is up and the work is being pushed as rapidly as possible. The firm has a large quantity of logs on hand and when the mill is completed, which will be about the middle of August, sawing will be carried on for a long time.

Kelley talks to Many.

Lieut. Gov. "Pat" Kelley toured in Montmorency and Alpena counties last week on his gubernatorial campaign.

All through the day he held fine meetings and was cordially received throughout both counties. Last night, in this city, he addressed a meeting of over 1,000 persons and could not have been treated better, had he been the president of the United States.

On all sides the candidate continues to discuss the mining question, taking the same stand that he assumed during his swing through the Upper Peninsula. His views were met with general approval—Grand Rapids News.

Nearly Drowned.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Franke, F. Graham and Viola Franke, and Mrs. Mary Tardiff and son, Calvin, of this city, narrowly escaped drowning while returning home in a row boat on Black lake Monday.

Without warning, an unknown launch, displaying a dim light, came toward them at full speed and struck the rowboat head on. The rowboat capsized and all were thrown into the water. Mr. Franke grabbed the launch rail and with the assistance of the occupants of the launch pulled the others in as fast as they came up. Mrs. Franke sustained a broken leg.

The owners of the launch were unable to reverse the engine, as the clutch failed to work and the steering gear was crippled. The party was transferred to another launch and finally brought to shore.

Farmer's Picnic and Barbecue

"Wednesday, August 17, has been selected for the annual Farmers Picnic and Barbecue at Jenison Park. The plans are now fully made for the all day and evening celebration at that Park. This event is so well known throughout Allegan and Otsego Counties that it is hardly necessary to attempt to work up enthusiasm, as the people from this territory look forward through the summer time to this day as a public holiday. There will be bands playing throughout the day. There will be a big barbecue with several roast oxen and sheep and coffee which will be served to all the guests by the committee having this in charge. In the morning, there will be a base ball game, and in the afternoon, there will be sports both on the water and on land. There will be speaking by distinguished people. Special rates on the Interurban and the Pere Marquette."

Hamilton

The Hamilton Milling Co. have sunk a large reservoir near their mill and also a large elevator will supply more power which was much needed owing to increased patronage.

William Burnett is afflicted with a severe case of rheumatism and lumbago.

The noise on the streets here indicate that the base ball season is in full blast and the citizens are wishing for cold weather.

Charles Woodruff of Hamilton has returned from a four weeks visit with relatives in Pennsylvania and New York state.

The pickle factory here is receiving a goodly quantity of cucumbers this week.

There were fifty-one tickets sold in Hamilton for Venetian night.

Nine girls aged from six to twelve years while on their way to pick berries for Mr. Johnson on the north side of the river undertook to walk across the railway bridge and when nearly across the morning freight came in sight. The curve at this point is a very serious one and had it not been for the timely effort of the 12 year old Lugterheid girl nearly all would have been killed. The latter girl had the presence of mind to raise an umbrella which was discovered by the engineer who barely stopped the train in time.

East Saugatuck

Little Heney Oosting from Holland is visiting his grandfather Mr. F. Bouman sr. this week.

Mr. Hietderks is spending his vacation at home with his parents.

Miss Johanna Wordhuis visited relatives in Zeeland last week.

A large number of children and grandchildren gathered at the home of Mrs. G. Tubbergen to help her celebrate her 83rd birthday Friday evening. Refreshments were served.

The Christian Reformed congregation will meet next Thursday afternoon to elect a new pastor. The present pastor Rev. J. Manni will preach his farewell sermon Sunday Aug. 7, 1910, after which he will leave for Douglas Park, Chicago.

Mrs. A. Ridder from Holland spent part of last week visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. Keen.

Miss Jessie Bouman from Holland was home over Sunday.

West Olive.

F. E. Stone, of Olive township, who is a candidate for the nomination of county drain commissioner was in the city looking up old friends and, incidentally putting in a lick for his candidacy. Mr. Stone is one of the oldest residents of Olive township, having lived there for 29 years. In regard to his run for office Mr. Stone said: "I believe that it is almost time that this office is passed around a bit. The present incumbent has held it for five years; but if I am elected and can hold the office for two terms I can promise you I won't ask for a third. I think two terms are enough for anybody and they ought to be satisfied with that." Mr. Stone has many friends and promises to be a strong contender in the primaries.

Crisp.

Rev. DeJong preached in the Crisp church last Sunday as Rev. Guikema is taking a two weeks vacation. He is expected to return this week.

Rev. and Mrs. Smitter visited friends here Sunday.

The Misses Elsie and Mary Brouwer of Grand Rapids have returned home after spending several days with relatives and friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. W. Kruthof is spending a few weeks with her daughter in Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Timmer of Holland visited relatives here Sunday.

At a special meeting of the West Crisp school district held last Thursday evening, it was decided to build a new two story school house next summer.

Henry and John Arnoldink spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. Garvelink at Harderwyk.

Laketown.

The unusual sight of a house being erected in the center of the road is one that anyone can see on the bee line road just east of what was the Ole Oleson place in Laketown. The old road which has been used some 50 years cut off the corner of the farm and the man who bought from Mr. Oleson wanted the road moved a few rods east and he is now erecting a cottage in the old track.

Noordeloos.

Yesterday the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. H. VanDyke of Noordeloos swallowed a quantity of fly poison which was standing in the house and was taken very ill Monday. Dr. J. Masselink of Zeeland was hastily summoned and with a horse and buggy covered four miles in ten minutes. The physician pumped the child's stomach.

Vriesland.

Dr. Van Zoeren of this place was in Zeeland Saturday visiting friends and relatives.

Zeeland.

James Wagenaar returned to South Dakota after spending a two weeks' visit with relatives and friends at this place.

While at work as section hand on the Pere Marquette tracks, John Verstrate of Zeeland was struck in the face by a timber which protruded from a passing train. His skull was fractured in two places and he is in a critical condition.

At a meeting of the Civic club, it has been decided to hold the annual picnic some time next month. The date has not yet been determined.

The Mission society of the Reformed church held a picnic at Alpena Beach Thursday.

At a congregational meeting which took place at the Reformed church Byron Center a call was extended to Rev. Vander Werp of Grand Rapids. This is the first time that the congregation has attempted to secure a regular pastor since their organization two months ago.

Rev. N. Boer, of Passiac, N. J. conducted the services at the First Reformed church Sunday.

Rev. Van Kersen of Pella, Iowa, conducted the services at the Second Reformed church Sunday. The pastor, Rev. Wm. Moerdyke, conducted the services in Byron Center.

George, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Van Henkelem broke his arm as a result of falling into an excavation that was being made for a cesspool.

The Misses Nettie and Martha De Jonge returned from Chicago after spending several days visiting with friends and relatives.

Sam Stobbelaar of Lansing is visiting his mother, Mrs. Stobbelaar on Church street.

Wm. John of Chicago is visiting his parents Rev. and Mrs. C. C. A. L. John on Centennial street.

Miss Edna Brandt returned Saturday from Macatawa Park after spending a week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Kamps.

A big open air meeting will be held this evening in our park. The speaker of the evening will be Mayor Ellis of Grand Rapids. The Zeeland band will furnish the music.

The large barn of Mr. L. Englishman at Oakland was struck by lightning Tuesday. Two horses were burned and a big quantity of grain, hay and farmer's tools. Two days before Mr. Englishman was offered $200 for one of the horses. The loss is about $1200 fully covered by insurance.

Elias and Evert Kloosterman are engaged by a well known firm in Pittsburgh in canvassing in Windsor, Can. They are very much pleased with the country and work there with great success.

A family reunion took place at the parsonage of the Christian Reformed church at Borculo in honor of Rev. J. B. Jonkman's 49th birthday anniversary. All his children and grandchildren were present and an enjoyable time was spent. As a token of their esteem for the pastor, the Consistory presented him with an encyclopedia of Dr. Kuiper of the Netherlands. Rev. Jonkman has for the past two and a half years been pastor at the above named church and was for seven and a half years the pastor of the North street Christian Reformed church in this city. After leaving Zeeland he held a charge at Hardewyk, a few miles north of Holland.

Overisel.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Nykerk—a daughter.

The following young men received their appointments this week to mark for the Heinze Pickle Co.

Mr. A. E. Lampen, manager at Grant, Mich., Gerrit Vander Kamp, bookkeeper at Holton. George

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Westveer of Holland and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson of Marshalltown, Ia. were the guests of her Mr. and Mrs. Hekhuis last Saturday.

Ben B. Hoffman and wife of Grand Rapids are the guests of her mother, Mrs. J. H. Albers.

Death of Dr. Dubbink

After a lingering illness of several weeks Dr. G. H. Dubbink, succumbed to tuberculosis about nine o'clock at Overisel Tuesday evening. Dr. Dubbink was 43 years old and is survived by a wife formerly Margaret Jeanette Kollen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Kollen, 174 West Fifteenth street.

Deceased was born Dec. 3, 1866 and spent his boyhood days on the farm at Overisel. He was a graduate of Hope College in 1892 and then took a course at the Western Theological Seminary, graduating in 1895. He became pastor of the Third Reformed church in 1895 and faithfully served as their pastor till 1904. His marriage took place in 1895 immediately after his graduation from the local seminary.

The Synod at Grand Rapids elected him as professor of Systematic Theology at the Western Theological seminary in 1904 and he ably carried on this work till the close of the school year last May, not missing a day at the institution for the year.

Dr. Dubbink was given the degree of D. D. by the Hope College council several years ago and has always been prominent in the work of higher education. He was on the editorial staff of The Leader and of De Hope and did much toward extending the influence of his work by means of the press.

Dr. Dubbink had been in failing health for some time and this spring moved to Overisel hoping thereby to improve his health. He was a consistent Christian and was beloved by all who knew him. He carried his influence with him into every walk of life and was faithful in his duties as a pastor, as an instructor and as a citizen.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Third Reformed church. The faculty of the Western Theological Seminary will have charge of the services. This was at the request of Mr. Dubbink before he passed away. Dr. N. M. Steffens and Dr. J. W. Beardslee will officiate at the church, and Dr. James F. Zwemer will close the services at the grave.

P. O. Sites Under Consideration

The committee appointed from the Board of Trade members, consisting of C. Ver Schure, J. J. Cappon, E. P. Stephan, G. J. Van Duren and Postmaster Van Schelven received seven proposals of sites for the new post office building to be erected here. Of the sites offered four are located on Central avenue and three on River street. They are: the site now occupied by Boone's livery barn, the property occupied by the former Boone residence, Dr. J. J. Mersen's property and the location of Mrs. Harrington's house, north of Dr. Mersen's. On River street the sites are: the property occupied by the Scott-Lugers planing mill, the corner occupied by McClintic's fruit store and the C. A. Stevenson residence. As some of these properties are too small the proposals include enough of the adjacent property to make approximately half an acre.

These locations are desirable places and any one of them would make an excellent location.

There is a great deal of interest shown in the location of the new building because it will be the permanent postoffice of this city. Furthermore, it is a fact that the postoffice usually reacts upon the surrounding business section making it the busiest part of a city. It is the center of a city's life and for that reason all are interested in seeing it located a centrally as possible.

Proposals for Paving West Eighth Street.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Common Council of the City of Holland, Michigan, at the office of the clerk of said city, until 7.30 o'clock p. m. of Wednesday August 3rd 1910, for the paying and otherwise improving of West Eighth street, between the west line of River street and the south line of Dock street and the East line of First avenue, according to plans and specifications as prepared by the city engineer.

Each proposal must be accompanied with a certified check for five per cent of the amount of the bid payable to the order of the City of Holland.

Plans and specifications of the work are on file in the office of the city engineer and also of the City Clerk of said city.

Proposals must be addressed to Richard Overweg, City Clerk and, endorsed on envelope, "Bids for Paving West Eighth street."

The council reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Common Council. Dated Holland, Mich., July 8, 1910.

3 28 Richard Overweg, City Clerk.

They have Linocord Buttonholes and "They don't tear out." Watch the collar man in our window. Lokker Rutgers Co.

Half a Chance

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM,

Author of "The Strollers," "Under the Rose," "The Lady of the Mount," Etc.

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

"A little errand first, driver," he called out. "To" and mentioned a street—"as fast as you can." The man straightened, touched his horse with his whip, and wheeling quickly, they dashed away.

As they did so John Steele thought he heard exclamations behind. Looking through the cab window, he saw at the gate the company gazing after him, obviously not yet recovered from their thrill of surprise following his unexpected action. He observed also two men on the other side of the street, who now ran across and held a brief altercation with one of the cabmen. As they were about to enter the cab several persons in the party apparently intervened, expostulating vigorously. It was not difficult to surmise the resentment of the group at this attempted summary seizure of a second one of their cabs.

"Those men must not overtake us, cabby. Go where you will! You understand?"

The man did. His fingers closed quickly on a sovereign, and once more he dashed his horse. For some time they continued at a rapid pace, now skirting the confines of the park, now plunging into a puzzling tangle of streets, but wherever they went the other cab managed always to "keep them in sight. It even began to creep up nearer. From his pocket John Steele drew a weapon. His eyes gleamed ominously. The pursuing hansom drew closer. Casting a hurried glance over his shoulder, he again called up to the driver.

"It's no use, gurner," came back the reply. "This 'oss 'as been out longer than 'is."

"Then turn the first dark corner and slow up a bit, for only a second. Afterward go on your very best as long as you can."

Another sovereign changed hands, and shortly afterward the vehicle dashed into a side street. It appeared as likely a place as any for his purpose. John Steele, hardly waiting for the man to draw rein, leaped out as far as he might. He landed without mishap, heard a whip snap furiously and darted back into a doorway. He had just reached it when the other cab drew near. For an instant he felt certain that he had been seen, but the pursuers' eyes were bent eagerly ahead. "This'll mean a liver for you, my man," he heard one of them shout to the driver. "We've got him, by"—A harsh, jubilant cry cut the air; then they were gone.

John Steele did not wait. Replacing the weapon in his pocket, he started quickly around the corner. His cabman could not lead them far; they would soon return.

Which way should he move? His face burned with fever; he did not heed it. A long, broad thoroughfare as he walked on had suddenly unfolded itself to his gaze. One side of this highway shone resplendent with the flaring lights of numerous stands and stalls displaying vegetables and miscellaneous articles.

About to turn back from this animated scene, John Steele hesitated. The road ran straight and sure toward the destination he wished to reach, while on either hand lay a network of devious ways.

He decided, crossed the street. Lights gleamed in his face. He pushed his way through the people unmolested and strode on, followed only by the noise of passing vehicles and carts.

On, on John Steele moved; on, on. Time passed. It would be a hard battle, but once in that part of the city he was striving to reach he might find those willing to offer him shelter—low-born, miserable wretches he had helped. In their midst was the one man in the world who could throw a true light on the events of the past, enable him to—

Behind him some one followed, some one who drew ever nearer, with soft, skulking steps which now he heard—

"Mr. Steele!" Even as he wheeled his name was called out.

Before the sudden fierce passion gleaming on John Steele's face, the bright flame of his look, the person who had accosted him shrank back. His pinched and pale face showed surprise, fear. Almost incoherently he began to stammer.

Steele looked about. They two, as far as he could see, were alone.

"I ask your pardon." The fellow found his voice. "I'll not be troubling you further, Mr. Steele."

"You were about to beg—of me?"

John Steele smiled.

Dandy Joe began to shuffle off in a spiritless way when—

"You are hungry?" said John Steele.

"A little, sir."

"A modest answer in view of the actual truth, I suspect," observed the other. But, although his words were brusque, he felt in his pocket. A sovereign—it was all he had left about him. When he had departed post-haste for Strathorn House he had neglected to furnish himself with funds for an indefinite period. A contingency he should have foreseen had risen. For the present he could not appear at the bank to draw against the balance he always maintained there. John Steele fingered that last sovereign, started to turn, when he caught the look in the other's eyes. Did it recall to him his own plight but a short twenty-four hours before?

"Very well," he said, and was about to give the coin to the man and walk away when another thought held him.

This fellow had been a link in a certain chain of events. The temptation grew to linger with him, the single, tangible, though paltry and useless figure in the drama he could lay hands on. John Steele looked around. In a byway he saw the lighted window of a cheap oyster buffet. Motioning to the man, he wheeled abruptly and started for it.

A few minutes later found them seated in the shabby back room. A number of faded sporting pictures adorned the wall. One—how John Steele started!—showed the Frisco Pet in a favorite attitude.

Steele spoke now. His dark eyes alone strangely. A sardonic expression lurked there. The proprietor could bring his companion a steak if he had one. Large or small? Large, with an enigmatical smile.

The proprietor hustled out.

A voice, hoarse, that of a man, was heard:

"The blasted fog is coming down fast."

The smaller man drew back. A shiver seemed to run over him. "They are a long while about the steak," he murmured.

"Your testimony helped to send him over the water, I believe?" said Steele, pointing out the picture of the Frisco Pet to Dandy Joe.

"How do you— I ain't on the stand now, Mr. Steele!" A spark of defiance momentarily came into Dandy Joe's eyes.

"No, no!" John Steele leaped back. "The harm's been done so far as you are concerned. You as a factor have disappeared from the case."

"Glad to hear you say so, Mr. Steele. I mean," the other's voice was uncertain, cautious, "that's a matter long since dead and done with. But as for my testimony helping to send him over the water!"

"Or under?" sotto voce.

Joe swallowed. "It was true, every word of it."

"Good!" John Steele spoke almost listlessly. "Always stick by any one who sticks to you, whether a friend or a pal or a patron."

"A patron!" From the other's lips fell an oath.

"But even if there had been something not quite—strictly in accord—which there wasn't"—quickly—"a man couldn't gainsay what had been said," Dandy Joe began.

"He could," indifferently.

"But that would be—"

"Confessing to perjury? Yes."

"Hold on, Mr. Steele!" The man's eyes began to shine with alarm. "I'm not on the"—

"I know. And it wouldn't do any good if you were."

"You mean"—in spite of himself the fellow's tones wavered—"because he's under the water?"

"No; I had in mind that even if he hadn't been drowned, your"—

"Wot! Hadn't?"

"That," said John Steele, "doesn't matter. The principal subject of any consequence relating to you is the steak, which is now coming." As he spoke he rose, leaving Dandy Joe alone at the table.

For a time he did not speak, sitting before a cheerless fire that feebly attempted to assert itself.

Once when the proprietor stepped in he asked, without looking around, for a certain number of grains of quinine with a glass of water—they probably kept it at the bar. Yes; the man always had it on hand and brought it in.

By this time Dandy Joe had pushed back his chair. His dull eyes gleamed with satisfaction, also perhaps a little calculation. He was thinking. A certain matter in which self interest played no small part had come to mind. Joe regarded him covertly.

"Asking your pardon for referring to it—but you've helped so many a poor chap—there's an old pal of mine what is down on his luck, and he was asking of me for a good lawyer who could give him a straight talk."

"I am not at present"—Steele experienced a sense of grim humor—"looking for new clients."

"Well, I thought I'd be mentioning the matter, sir. You see, he's been out of old England for a long time and was going away again, when wot should be suddenly hear but that his old woman that was died and left a few hundred pounds or so—enough to start a nice little pub for him and me to run—only it's in the hands of a trustee, who is waiting for him to appear and claim it."

"You say he has been out of England?" John Steele stopped. "How long?"

"A good many years. There was one or two little matters ag'in him when he left home, so he wanted to see a lawyer and find out, in any case, how he could get his money without—"

"The law getting hold of him. What is his name?"

"Tom Rogers."

The blood surged to Steele's temples.

"You can give me this Tom Rogers' address." He could barely control his voice in his agitation.

"I, sir—you see, I can't quite do that, for Tom's laying low, you understand. But if you would let him call around quiet-like on you"—

"On me?" Steele spoke slowly. "I hardly think the case will prove sufficiently attractive." The proprietor stepped in. Steele took the change that was laid on the table, leaving a half crown, which he indicated that Dandy Joe could appropriate.

"Better not think of going now, sir," the proprietor said to John Steele. "Never saw anything like it the way the fog has thickened."

Dandy Joe stepped toward the door. "I'm going to have a try."

John Steele waited a moment, then with a perfunctory nod walked quietly to the front door. He looked in the direction his late companion had turned. His figure was just discernible. In a moment it would have been swallowed by the fog, when quickly John Steele walked after him.

CHAPTER XIV.

THROUGH THE FOG.

THE dense veil overhanging the city, while favorable to John Steele in some respects, lessening for the time his own danger, made more difficult the task to which he now set himself. He dared not too closely approach the figure before him lest he should be seen and his purpose divined. Once or twice Dandy Joe looked around, more perhaps from habit than any suspicion that he was followed.

At a crossing, where opposing currents had met and become congested, utter confusion reigned. From the masses of vehicles of all kinds, constituting a seemingly inextricable blockade, arose the din of hoarse voices.

Joe essayed to cross. By dint of dodging and darting between restless horses he reached the other side. A sudden closing in of cabs and carts midway between curbs held John Steele back. He caught quickly at the bridle of the nearest horse and forced it aside. An expostulating shout, a half scream from somewhere, greeted the action. A whip snapped, stung his cheek.

"Turn back. Get out of this somehow, cabby!" He heard familiar tones, saw the speaker, Sir Charles, and, by his side—yes, through the curtain of fog, so near he could almost reach out and touch her, he saw as in a flash Jocelyn Wray!

She, too, saw him, the man in the street, his pale face lighted up ghost-like from the mist. A cry fell from her lips, was lost amid other sounds. An instant eyes looked into eyes, hers dilated, his unnaturally bright, burning! Something struck him—a wheel. He half fell, recovered himself, managed to reach the curb.

Dandy Joe had disappeared. The hope of attaining his end through him, of being led to the retreat of one he had so long desired to find, had proved illusive.

John Steele did not go far in mere aimless fashion. Leaning against a wall, he strove once more to plan, but ever as he did so through his thought the girl's fair face, looking out from enshrouding lace, intruded.

He forgot his purpose, when a figure coming out of a public house through one of the doors near which he had halted caught his attention. Dandy Joe, a prodigal with unexpected riches, wiped his lips as he sauntered past John Steele and continued his Butter will be Butter Next Winter.

The "ultimate consumer" in Holland will be forced to pay a higher price for his butter next winter than he ever has before.

At least this is the cheerful prospect at present.

Statistics on butter in cold storage throughout the country show a condition that is perplexing the trade, namely a price level higher than last year by 2½ cents a pound despite an increase this year of supplies of 225,000 tubs over last year.

The situation is without precedent and is causing considerable anxiety. June butter, which is the standard for storage, was put away this year at an average of about 28.59 cents per pound for specials, which is the highest grade, compared with 26.31 cents a year. Adding the usual 2 cents cost for storage, the price at which this butter will come out of storage next fall and winter is brought up to 30.59 cents.

These figures give scant encouragement for a lower cost of living next winter, in butter at least.

About the same situation prevails, moreover, in the other kindred products, eggs and cheese. Both are on a much higher level of values, than last year, despite good increase in supplies.

New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia packers held 723,590 packages of butter July 1 this year, an increase of 239,990 packages over the record a year ago. A package of tub is 60 pounds, making the weight of butter in storage July 1, 43,415,400 pounds.

The usual explanation given by members of the trade for a combination of larger supplies and higher prices is that the Chicago packers have been in the country market for dairy products on a larger scale than ever this year. Their bidding for butter, cheese and eggs, is said to account for the higher level. In regard to butter the impression is that the packers would like to see butter higher in order to make a better demand for their oleo.

Even the most conservative of New York dealers believe that the packers are extending their operations each year in dairy products. The well equipped stores operated by the packers in that city and others are the best evidence they say in support of their opinion.

Cheerful prospects for the man who pays the bills, is it?

If the railroads are congested with freight at this time in the year, what will be the situation when the big crops begin to move?

If a man is willing to mortgage his house and lot to buy an automobile he shouldn't kick if he has to mortgage his furniture in order to pay his repair bills.

One consoling thought during the hot weather is that we are all free and untrammelled American citizens and we will have a bunch of men coming around telling us about it until some time in November.

The expert swimmers are beginning to get themselves drowned. One good thing about the young man who can't swim is that he never shows off by getting so far from the shore that there is no chance for him to return.

Chase Osborne, candidate for governor for the State of Michigan in his South Haven speech said among other things that even "Christ was an insurgent." It has created no end of adverse comment all over the state. There is no room for comments of this kind in a political speech. It does not belong there, but this statement simply co-insides with other statements just as erroneous and erratic and will not be tolerated by the Michigan voters.

Osborne Didn't make Good in Many Places

Thursday, Chase S. Osborne, candidate for governor, toured Mason county, delivering five speeches and winding up at Ludington. Some of his local friends, by dint of effort, secured a number of automobiles to accompany Mr. Osborne on his trip. Considerably smaller crowds greeted the candidate than were expected after the expensive advertising. At Peltons corners few auditors appeared, at Custer perhaps half a dozen voters, at Amber the meeting was cancelled because of no listeners, at Fountain the noon hour and the band drew the biggest crowd of the day, between thirty and forty. In Ludington less than one fourth turned out as appeared to greet another candidate under similar circumstances in the last campaign. What is even more significant is the fact that there were large crowds on the street down town who evidently were not sufficiently interested to walk up to the court house. The gathering was also very cold, those who were there showing no enthusiasm and scant interest in what the speaker had to say. A number of candidates for county offices consented to accompany the party on the auto trip upon the express assurance that they in no course committed themselves to Mr. Osborne's support.

The greatest disappointment was expressed by his auditors at the character of the speeches made. The one delivered at Ludington is said to have been representative. His auditors plainly wanted a discussion of public policies and methods of public administration, of political principals and platforms, but apart from a scant five minutes given to denouncing present state officers, Mr. Osborne devoted himself to the methods of the typical politician out for votes breathing cheap flatteries for Ludington and her citizens.

It is quite possible that had Mr. Osborne met with a warm and enthusiastic crowd he might have acquitted himself with a better speech but the results of the day's trip, the evident fact that he would get few votes in Mason county seemed to dispirit him as it did his friends.—Ludington Record Appeal.

From some of the remarks made by the Hon. Chase Osborne in his gubernatorial campaign many people are led to the belief that he is in the employ of the state democratic campaign committee. His chief talk is along the lines that every person engaged with the administrations of the past few years has been "wrong" and, as he has been an appointee under several of these, he must necessarily be "wrong," to use his own logic. Perhaps Mrs. Osborn realizes that he stands little chance for the nomination and is making it as hard as possible for the man who is selected to head the republican ticket, to get the votes necessary for election in November.—Traverse City Daily Eagle.

Robinson's Famous Shows Coming.

The time is drawing near and the heart of the child is glad and a great many of said children are wearing grown-up clothes. The circus appeals to all ages, that fact is well known, in spite of the "I had to go to take the children," etc. Almost any child could and would a great deal rather go alone, but—

The circus this year comes a little earlier than usual but circus day is circus day, and it comes but once a year.

The Robinson's Famous Shows will supply the enjoyment, the mere mention of the name Robinson being a guarantee as to what is in store for local circus goers; and you all will go, just a glimpse of the parade will give you the circus fever.

The grand free street parade will leave the show grounds at 10 a. m. and travel over the main downtown streets, returning to the show grounds where a startling and sensational open air free exhibition will be given. Doors open in the afternoon at 1 o'clock and at night at 7. The performances starting just an hour later in each case. Holland, Saturday Aug. 6.

The Buttermilk Cure.

An experienced doctor says the sour of buttermilk will dissolve every sort of earthly deposit in the blood vessels and keep the veins and arteries so supple that there can be no clogging up, hence, no deposit of irritating and calcareous matter around the joints. Rheumatism and gout are thus prevented by using buttermilk which he claims prevents the stiffening of the blood vessels which brings on decay. Buttermilk stimulates the liver, stomach and kidney, tones the stomach, and furnishes material for healthy blood.

Hope Church Next Sunday

The semi annual "All-Day offering for foreign missions and the work of Rev. Willis G. Hoekje, the mission pastor in Japan will be on August 7th.

In anticipation of that Rev. Edward Niles preaches Sunday morning on "This Day of Good Tidings"—II Kings 7:9.

In the evening he will give a popular review and digest of the remarkable scientific study of Heathenism, its forces antagonistic to light, and the victorious power of the Gospel by a German scholar and missionary to the Dutch East Indies. The book is entitled "The Living Christ and Dying Heathenism". It is a unique contribution to literature.

Next Wednesday evening, the first of a monthly series of "Hours for Praise" will be held. The special topic is "Ira D. Sankey. His Life. My favorite of his hymns and tunes.

The music for Sunday is under the direction of Willis Diekema and will consist of a duet by Miss Grace W. Browning and Willis Diekema entitled "In His Hands are all the corners of the Earth" by Schaecker.

A TYPEWRITER BUILT TO ORDER

If you could have a typewriter made to order, how would you have it? Built for show—or built for service? Loaded down with attachments, devices and mechanism—or simple, durable and efficient? Would you demand the most machinery—or the best, in materials, workmanship and results?

The ROYAL STANDARD TYPEWRITER has every quality that you would demand in a made-to-order machine. It meets every requirement of efficiency, durability and economy.

The first thing you notice about the Royal is its simplicity. You see instantly that it is constructed on new and correct principles, with all needless attachments and devices eliminated.

The Royal is built for service. It has only about half as many parts as other standard machines. The simplicity thus secured works for your advantage in four ways: A saving in the original investment; low cost of maintenance; minimum of effort and maximum of convenience in operation; and the "long life" of the machine.

The price of the Royal is $65—a new standard price for a high grade writing machine.

A Diekema Enthusiast.

Congressman G. J. Diekema has been busy the last few days in Ionia county looking over the situation there. At Belding he was given a fine reception, and he declares the outlook throughout the county could not be better from his standpoint. An incident of the reception at Belding was the reading of a poem written by Frederick A. Bush, the "Banner" poet of Belding. The poem follows:

An Ode to Diekema

The Ides of old November are headed here again,
When public office seekers must stand an awful strain
When all the many fences a scattered here and there
Must be looked after closely and with the greatest care.

And the man who runs for congress no matter what his fame
Has to get out and hustle that he may save his name.

But in the old Fifth district there's just one thing to say
The people can't forget their friend the gallant Diekema.

Deacon Ellis isn't in it in the district here and there

For Diekema is the people's choice for he is on the square

And the members down at Washington all want him back again

For losing such a man as "Diek" would surely cause them pain.

They want to make him speaker and I believe they can

For where in all the country is there a better man.

His voice is tuned to silver, his oratory great

And everybody calls him an honor to the state.

So here's to G. J. Diekema, the hero of the hour,

That all this part of Michigan would like to keep in power.

We'll yank our coats together in the old familiar way

And work and shout and hustle for G. J. Diekema

And everybody says Amen.

CHINA IN STATE OF DECAY

Ruin Seen Everywhere, and No Attempt Made to Stay the Ravages of Time.

"Along the road—and this is characteristic—nothing is being repaired," writes the Peking correspondent of the London Times. "It is the national failing to spend nothing on repairs, to build and then leave the building to fall gradually into decay and ruin. Nor is anything cleaned, and the squalor that is a feature even of the imperial palace in Peking is most extraordinary. A few miles out of Honanfu there is a fine stone bridge of five arches; but the piers are falling away, the parapet has disappeared, and the flagstones with which it is paved have great gaps and hollows, so that the cart rumbles and crashes and bumps across it in a way that would break any but a Chinese springless cart. To repair is no one's business."

At another stage of his journey he remarks: "Perhaps to some extent the anticipated coming of a railway, which will kill the present cart traffic, may account for the shocking condition of the native inns. With railway extension in the air, there is no inducement for the innkeeper to spend money on the upkeep of his hotel. Nothing is repaired; their filth and squalor are amazing. In the inn yard the well has its mouth below the level of the soil, so that water which is split may flow back into the well and carry with it the surface drainage."

"A doctor must notice the prevalence of consumption. To the universal habit of expectoration on the floor, the exclusion of air, and the absence of drainage this prevalence must be due."

SEEK TO TERRIFY ENEMIES

Insects, Physically Unable to "Put Up Fight," Resort to All Sorts of Schemes.

It is generally believed that many animals, especially insects, assume what is called a "terrifying attitude," by means of which they escape their natural enemies. In the Zoological "Jahrbuch" Mr. Arnold Japha describes the "terrifying attitude" of the hawk-eyed moth.

During the day this insect sits with folded wings on the willow, or other tree. The eye spot and the rose-red part of the wings are hidden, and the moth looks like a group of dried willow leaves. This is its protective attitude, by which it wishes to escape observation. But if disturbed, it immediately assumes the "terrifying attitude." The eye spot and red are displayed, thorax arched, abdomen curved up. This is accompanied by a trussing and retracting of the front of the body.

The movement lasts some few seconds, or half a minute. This is thought to frighten the moth's enemies. The eye spot may suggest the eye of some larger animal, while the energetic motion may give the impression that the enemy itself is about to be seized and devoured.

But does the moth's "terrifying attitude" really frighten its enemies, and allow it to escape? Standfuss tried some experiments with a view to settling this point. He gave specimens of the moth to nightingale, red-breast, black-cap and other birds. Four out of five were obviously frightened when the moth assumed the "terrifying attitude," and left it alone after one trial.

In the Olden Days.

Galliard Hunt describes the social graces of Dolly Madison and her First Drawing-Room, in the June Harper's, and recalls that those were the days when the society of the nation was upheld on the foundation of two principles. "One was that a man of high rank in the public service was entitled to high rank in private life. Everybody was proud of the new republic and thought it an honor to associate with those who guided its destinies. The other was that members of families who had always occupied prominence in private life should continue in their position. It was not until the next generation that the political doctrine of the equality of men was construed to require a removal of the barriers which separated groups of people in private life."

Fine for Tabby.

A middle-aged Washington maiden possesses a cat that is the light of her eyes. Life is a gray misery when household duties compel her shopping far from the adored tabby. But love has found a way. She has built two little bags, one of woven for winter wear, warm and cozy as a pocket; the other of netting mesh for warm weather. In each she has crocheted or quilted, or however women work such things, a neat circular window for light and comfort.

Any day she may be seen in the shopping district, smiling, for hanging at her belt is a bag from which a comfortable cat looks contemptuously out upon a walking world and placidly views the passing show.

Perfectly Easy.

"See here, my man," said the philanthropist who was doing an investigating stunt on his own account, "you are an interesting puzzle to me." "Is that so?" queried the other. "Yes, it's so," answered the party of the philanthropy part. "You are too honest to steal, too proud to beg, and too lazy to work. How do you manage to live?"

"Oh," was the reply, "I got trusted."

FORGIVING AND BEING FORGIVEN.

Matthew 18:21-35.—July 31.

"If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you."—Matthew 6:14.

ST. PETER'S query, "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him, until seven times?" is a query that comes to many. It is a question that at some time and in some manner or form is quite sure to come to all the followers of Christ. Imperfect ourselves and surrounded by others who are imperfect, we continually have need to exercise mercy, benevolence, forgiveness. There is something in the human mind which naturally appreciates justice and takes special note of injustice done toward us. It is also remarkable how many people take a delight in meting out justice to an offender against the law. It is this spirit which has been noted in mobs. Men and women and children work themselves into a very frenzy, as advocates of justice, in expressions against a guilty wretch who escapes the clutches of the law and a just penalty, and insist upon taking vengeance into their own hands. It would appear that many of those who participate in mobs have at times been guilty of nearly or quite as great crimes as those which they reprehend in another and would punish. It would appear that there is a craving in the fallen flesh to do violence to another, or to see violence done, if only there could be an excuse for it on the score of justice. Alas, poor creatures, how wrong such a condition of heart, how reprehensible in the sight of God! And yet those who thus wrongfully give loose rein to their passions, quiet their own consciences, at least, by concluding that they are viewing the matter like God, loving justice and hating iniquity.

It is true that Justice is the foundation of Divine Government—that God is just; but it is also true that God is loving and kind, and that he accepts to himself the very name of love, for "God is love." Such should learn that to be in the Divine likeness is to govern one's self and one's course by the rules of justice, but to measure the course of others by the rule of love and sympathy, generosity and forgiveness.

In answer to St. Peter's question, our Lord said that we should forgive a brother not only seven times, but seventy times seven. What a breadth of generosity is here suggested! How it tells us of the loving mercy and forgiveness of him with whom we have to do! But let us remember another statement of this same matter, where it is implied that before the forgiveness is granted, it is to be at least desired, if not sought. "If thy brother trespass against thee seven times in a day and seven times in a day shall say, 'I repent,' thou shalt forgive him"—or to the extent of seventy times seven. We must even assume that the Lord meant that in our hearts we should already forgive the brother his trespasses, even though we might wisely wait to express our forgiveness until his attitude manifested some desire for it. The disciples of Christ are to be continually in the attitude of generosity and filled with the spirit of forgiveness as is the heavenly Father—ready and waiting to be gracious, and under proper conditions, to manifest that readiness.

To illustrate this matter the Master spoke a parable. He said, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain King which would take account of his servants" (vs. 23). But, as we understand him, he meant that the church at the present time is the embryonic Kingdom and is being dealt with by the Lord after the manner of the illustration in this parable. It is not therefore an illustration of God's dealing with the world. He is not dealing with the world at all. He is not calling them his servants in any sense of the word—only believers, consecrated ones, occupy this favorable position of Divine relationship and only these are meant in the parable. Furthermore, the parable does not even consider the church on the score of original sin. It is not the thought that original sin may be cancelled on account of prayer. The penalty for original sin needed to be paid, not by the prayer of the sinners, but by the precious blood of Christ. But after having our sins forgiven through turning from a sin and faith in Christ, and through consecration to the Lord and begotting of the holy spirit, then we are his servants, and the parable relates to these only.

The first servant mentioned in the parable had been very derelict as a servant of God. As a follower of Christ he had come far short. The time of reckoning came. He realized it and besought Divine favor and mercy, promising to do all he could to make up for the deficiencies. He was heard; the sentence upon him was stayed. But when he went forth to find a fellow servant who owed him a trifling sum, and would have no mercy upon him, his master was very angry and declared that he, too, must be harshly dealt with and receive no mercy, because he had shown none to his fellow-servant. His lord's words were, "Shouldst not thou also have had compassion (mercy) upon thy fellow servant even as I had mercy on thee?" And his lord "delivered him to the tormentors until he should pay all that was due." The amount due would not include any part of the penalty of original sin, but merely the penalty for the short comings of the transgressor as respects his Covenant relationship, as a servant who was also a debtor from the time he became a servant.

The Lord's words concluding the parable are, "So shall also my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother his trespasses." In another text our Lord inculcates the same thought in different words, saying: "If ye forgive men their trespasses your heavenly Father will also forgive you."

The purpose and object of our heavenly Father in thus dealing with us seems not clear to all. It is not that he wishes to retaliate. It is not that he would say to us, "If you are mean towards others I will be mean towards you." Rather the lesson is this, "I am kind to the unthankful; I have been very gracious to you in the forgiveness of your original sin and in accepting your consecration to be my servant and in bringing you into my family, but I have called you into this position for a special purpose and you will not be fit nor be prepared for the service I desire for you unless you learn the lesson of forgiveness and generosity; hence, for your sake I make the rule that I will be no more generous to you and your imperfections than you are generous toward your brethren in their imperfections. I do this in order to teach you a great lesson which cannot be so well learned in any other way. What I am seeking in you as my servant is perfection in my character-likeness. You are inclined to look at the justice of my character and to copy it and to deal severely with others who are your debtors. I wish to make clear to you that the grandest elements of my character are illustrated from the standpoint of my love and sympathy, my kindness and forbearance. Because I desire you to progress in this character-likeness and so come to the position where I can use you in my service more abundantly, therefore I rule that you must be forgiving and gracious one toward another even as I have already been gracious toward you, and even as I propose yet further to be gracious to you, if you will abide in harmony with my spirit of love and seek to walk in my way. I am ready to forgive the loving and generous who are seeking to copy my character; I am ready to be kind and generous and forgiving to the greatest degree."

"The kindest and the happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear,
And something every day they live
To pity, and perhaps forgive."

35 Years ago To-day.

On Monday afternoon, Cornelius, a son of Rev. Jacob Vander Meulen, of the Holland Reformed church of Muskegon, was drowned while playing about the boom near Ryerson's saw-mill.

Mr. Wm. Van Patten has completed his new addition to his drug store.

A twelve year old son, Martin, of Rev. L. J. Hulst, was drowned on Tuesday evening last, at Grand Rapids, in Grand River.

WHAT YOU SAW 25 YEARS AGO

The clothing store of E. J. Harrington was burglarized last Saturday night and as near as can be estimated somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars worth of clothing taken.

Shortly after eight o'clock, Thursday morning, July 23, General Grant died.

Tony DeKruif has sold his famous trotter "Woodlark" for a fabulous price. Some put the figures as high as $8,500.

The celebrated colt of Dr. McNett of Grand Haven, sired by "Turk," owned by Dr. Van Putten, Holland, won the $600 purse at the East Saginaw races, in three straight heats, one heat being made in 2.28.

Capt. P. Pfanstiel once more is as good as his word. For two weeks he has been promising the public an opposition boat; and while everybody was ridiculing the idea, the Captain proceeds quietly to Chicago and returns in charge of the "Adrienne," a staunch little propeller, owned by Capt. Leighton of South Haven, and lately engaged in the excursion business at Chicago. She is a fast going boat, not old, and carries from one to two hundred excursionists. Monday she made an excursion to Saugatuck, Tuesday to South Haven, and tomorrow Saturday she will make a trip to Grand Haven with the students of the Summer Normal.

WHAT YOU SAW 15 YEARS AGO

There seems to be no question now but that the Chicora wreck has been located. Lamps, sacks of flour and other valuable packages have been picked up between Saugatuck and Pier Cove. Jimmy Reed, the Bay City diver who made a proposition to resurrect the steamer Elbe for $200,000, has been prospecting along the shore this week, and the News scribe learns that Reed and the Graham & Morton Co. have been figuring on starting out a new rescuing crew early next week. When the tugs L. S. Payn and Frank Edwards dragged the east shore for the wreck there were only two places where the drags struck wreckage and that was four miles south of this harbor and at Pier Cove. Mr. Reed we understand will make a contract to raise the Chicora for less than $3,000. The friends of the lost crew and passengers are anxious to see the Chicora produced.

WHAT YOU SAW 10 YEARS AGO

Bernard Bosman, a young man from New Holland who was employed in the Ottawa Furniture factory, was drowned while bathing at Diekema's Point, last Monday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. In company with other young men Mr. Bosman left the residence of Mrs. J. Brouwer, where he made his home in this city and went down the bay to take a swim.

Arend Bosman and Gertrude M. Marsilje were united in marriage last evening at 7 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Marsilje, 377 Land street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. M. Vander Werp, in the presence of the near relatives and intimate friends. The bridal party entered to the music of the wedding march played by Mrs. Albert Keppel and in one of the parlors, decorated with palms, ferns and sweet peas, the solemn words were spoken.

Michigan's Lakes.

Five thousand lakes of all sizes is the proud total claimed by the state of Michigan. Some of them are mysterious bodies, having neither inlet nor outlet, nor so far as can be discovered by sounding, bottom.

Many of the smaller lakes, according to Fur News, are slowly growing over and have wide margins of tough sod that will support the weight of a man, although merely resting on water or a thin mud of unknown depth.

These margins tremble to the tread and quiver for many feet around when stepped upon. There are instances where a lake has become entirely overgrown and for so long a period that the surface becomes solid and the existence of water underneath is unsuspected.

The Pere Marquette Railroad Company, when building a branch between Grand Rapids and Lansing, returned to the work one morning to find that several rods of roadbed had disappeared during the night and a considerable lake had taken its place. Thousands of feet of timber and many car loads of earth were dumped in before bottom was found and the road had anything like a firm foundation. The pressure of the displaced water heaved the earth and cracked it for some distance around, tilting large forest trees, some of which fell.

Water came up through these crevices, bringing eyeless fish, both bass and bullheads, convincing certain former skeptics that when any organ of sense or locomotion falls into disuse it degenerates and finally is lost. Probably these fish were the descendants of others that had lived in darkness for ages.

A small lake in Bowne Township, supposed by the rural folk to be bottomless, swallowed up a full half acre at one grip a few years ago, and where the slide took place the water is apparently as deep as ever.

In the extreme western edge of Ionia County there is a little lake of about three acres in area; it is without any visible feeders or outlet. It is surrounded by woods on the high land, while its margin is grown up to shrubs and flags and grasses peculiar to the ordinary swamp.

This is another of the mysterious water holes, termed bottomless, one party having sounded 150 feet without finding bottom. The water is red and unfit to drink and millions of minute particles of vegetable matter are held in suspension and are in commotion as if stirred by force of an undercurrent or boiling springs.

The only fish are big-mouthed bass and bullheads. For all that the water seems to be so swampy in character it does not detract from the flavor of the fish, probably owing to the fact of its being of better quality in its lower depths.

Nagley's Lake in Kent County, is formed like a great horseshoe and is about seven miles in circumference. It has been sounded in one place and showed a depth of 250 feet. It has but one insignificant feeder and the natural evaporation must be considered, and yet it has an outlet which flows water sufficient for power to drive a saw mill and grist mill proving that it is fed by heavy flowing spring that man has never seen. The water is clear blue and cold and the bottom is hard marl lime.

DEATHS

The remains of Walbert Vander Hoorn, who was drowned at Lakeville, Minn., arrived here Tuesday afternoon. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 1:30 from the home, 55 East 15th street, Rev. J. Lumkes, pastor of the Fourth Reformed church, officiating. Besides the mother there are two brothers and three sisters to mourn the death of the young man. He was 22 years old and had been employed on a railroad in Minnesota for the past two or three months. The family came here from the Netherlands about five months ago.

Fred Gordon, of Nunica, candidate for the nomination for county treasurer on the Republican ticket, was in the city yesterday, looking after his political interests. He called upon friends here and made acquaintance with others. Mr. Gordon says his prospects are bright.

Some of the Qualifications of a Good Clerk.

The Michigan Tradesman in a recent issue, published an instructive article, on good clerks, written by Fred Beuwkes, of the Lokker Rutgers clothing company. The article is very instructive and gives the store manager's idea of an efficient clerk. Next week the News will publish an article of what a clerk thinks of some bosses and how they appreciate the actions of others. It is purely an article giving the clerk's side of the question. Mr. Beuwkes' contribution follows:

The ought to be qualities of a good clerk are numerous. I will try to explain as briefly as possible from many years of experience my idea of what constitutes a good clerk.

A great many people have an idea that any one can occupy the position of clerk, but they do not stop to think that there are many requirements necessary to become a good clerk.

First. Any one who wishes to become a clerk should have a liking for the work and should be willing to partake of the sweet and the sour as it is handed out to him, because the life of a clerk is not all roses. There are some thorns. In order to be a good clerk he should be punctual at all times and in all things. He should be honest, because a salesman who is not strictly honest has no chance at all in the long run. Be honest; be honest with all; be honest with yourself; be honest with your house and be honest with your customer. Don't do anything that will arouse suspicion. He should be dressed neat and clean, as the first impression that a customer gets of a clerk has a great deal to do with the sale. Always be ready when a customer enters to wait on him immediately. The clerk who lounges around with his hands in his pockets or looking everywhere but at the customer and who acts as though he was anything but interested has started an impression with the customer which will make it the harder for him to make a sale. The salesman must have the business at heart, must want to push and boost it, must seek to do everything to help it along. He must have the real interest of the firm at heart all the time. If he has this he will not be looking out of the window or across the store or down the aisle or gazing at the cashier when there is a customer in view. While always having the firm's interest in mind, do not neglect the interest of your customer.

Treat your customer who wants a pair of laces or a yard of baby ribbon just as well as one who wants a pair of $5 shoes or a baby's dress. The buyer of laces may want a pair of shoes in a few days and the buyer of baby ribbon may want a go-cart. In meeting customers there is one thing which costs nothing yet means a great deal and that is a smile. Go to a customer with a smile of friendliness. Make him feel that you are glad to see him, make him feel at home at the store, whether he buys or not. Make him feel that you appreciate his trade and if possible try to remember the customer's name. Nothing will make a customer feel more at home than when he is addressed by his own name. In dealing with customers the object should always be to please them. It is essential that he be prompt, cheerful and willing. He can ill afford to display bad humor to those patrons who maintain him in his position by patronage. Do not argue with a customer. If there is any dispute call in the manager of the trouble department and let him attend to it. Don't discuss politics or religion during business hours as you are wasting time and it is not good for the business. A clerk should know his and her place. He should know when to speak and when to keep still. A clerk should see work and not always wait until he is told. A good housekeeper can always find work, and so it is with a good clerk. He can always find something to do, for the work in the store is never done. Keep your department clean, neat and tidy. Have a place for everything and have everything in its place. Don't let old shelf worn boxes occupy your selves. Learn to know your stock. Know what is in the window, so that when a customer asks for a certain article you can place your hand on it without upsetting everything in the store. Make a practice of studying and examining goods so when you are asked different questions in regard to certain articles you can give a prompt and satisfactory reply. Make the customer understand that you know what you are selling, and also try and win their confidence by dealing honestly and uprightly. Don't tell falsehoods in order to make a sale. Don't give the customer the impression that you know it all, and don't always say everything you know. For example, a woman might come to your shoe department, wishing to buy a pair of shoes. She tells you a size 3 is large enough. Don't be a fool and tell her truthfully she wears a size 6, for you would make her unhappy. This you must keep to yourself. Never rob people of the thought that gives them joy.

A clerk should have a fair education, especially in penmanship, arithmetic and grammar. He should have some knowledge of book keeping and should have some business education. Many of the clerks of today did not have the chance to get a college education, but that is no excuse, as there are correspondence schools which give a person an opportunity to study by himself, and this, with actual practice, will make a better business man or woman of them.

Young men, if you visit saloons or if you are in the habit of smoking, don't do it during business hours, as your breath will be offensive to a great many of your customers, and if your stomach is loaded with whiskey you are not fit or able to occupy the position you hold. My motto is, "Keep sweet, keep sober, and keep sailing." Keep away from pool rooms or any other places that will take your mind and thought from your work. Read a great deal on subjects pertaining to your work and always bear in mind that the clerk of to-day will be the business man of the future. Always aim to work up, but you cannot get a promotion unless you show that you have the right qualifications. You will notice that the clerk who is late in the morning is also the first to leave in the evening, standing ready with his hat in his hand when the bell rings. Such a clerk will never reach the top of the ladder, as his thoughts are in putting in his time and receiving his check and not working for the interest of the firm.

This subject is a very broad one, but time does not permit me to say much more. I would like to mention just a few don'ts:

Don't chew gum during business hours.

Don't read when your time is not your own.

Don't do fancy work, as your boss does not pay you for that.

Don't wear out the telephone by gossiping.

Don't come to work at 7:30 when you should be there at 7.

Don't upset the stock and then wait until some one else straightens it.

Don't forget to work when the boss is gone.

Don't forget to thank your customer for his patronage.

Don't forget to ask him, especially if he is a stranger, to call again.

Don't knock any of your competitors.

Don't be forgetful.

In doing your work do it heartily and fully. Do not grumble and do not knock. If you have any grievances tell the boss and not the other clerks. Boost for the house, because when you do that you are boosting for yourself. Work as though it were your own business that you are pushing and you will school yourself so that when you are able to have a business of your own you will have experience and training which will be of great value to you. Remember that square dealing, fair treatment and good merchandise furnish the foundation to future and continued business. And the first two are largely up to you, Mr. Salesman.

Fred Beuwkes.

Proposed Improvement of East Fourteenth street Special street Assessment District.

Holland, Mich., July 21, 1910.

Notice is hereby given: That the common council of the city of Holland has cause to be made and deposited with the city clerk, for examination, the profile, diagram and estimates for the proposed grading of East Fourteenth street between the East line of Marsilje's subdivision and the West line of Fairbanks Avenue, in the City of Holland, pursuant to grade and profile to be adopted in connection with the proposed improvement.

That the whole of the cost and expense of said work and improvement will be defrayed by special assessment upon the lots and lands or parts of lots and lands abutting upon said part of said East Fourteenth street.

That the lands, lots and premises upon which said special assessment shall be levied shall include all the private lots, lands, and premises abutting upon said part of said street, all of which said lots, lands, and premises as herein set forth, to be designated and declared to constitute a special assessments district for the purpose of special assessment to defray the cost and expense of grading said part of said street in the manner heretofore set forth, said district to be known and designated as the East Fourteenth street special street assessment district in the city of Holland.

That on Wednesday, August 17, 1910, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., the common council will meet at their room to consider any objections or suggestions that may be made to said assessment district, and to the improvement, estimates, plans and profile.

GOOD WORK

Done Daily in Holland, Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Holland still continued, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case.

Mrs. E. S. Strong, 348 Lincoln Ave., Holland, Mich., says: "About four years ago I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble. My back was very lame, there were pains through my kidneys and I was subject to attacks of dizziness. The kidney secretions were unnatural and annoyed me greatly. While in that condition, a friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and I began their use. In a few days the pain and lameness in my back disappeared and it was not long before the kidney secretions became natural. I have had no return attack of kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
